Research Interest

My research focuses on understanding the broader impacts of gender-based violence within marginalized communities, with a particular emphasis on how systemic inequalities and institutional barriers shape survivor experiences. I am interested in community-centered approaches to addressing gender-based violence, survivor advocacy, and how research can inform policy change to create safer, more equitable environments. My work aims to uncover the social, cultural, and policy-related factors that hinder survivors' access to resources and support systems, and I seek to contribute to solutions that prioritize survivor agency and empowerment.
